

GAMING OUT THE REAL NEEDS OF TODAY'S STUDENTS

As a country we're doing a better job than ever enrolling students in college. But when it comes to getting them across the finish line, we're failing where less than half of students who start college finish. Today's college students are more diverse than any previous generation - but the current proposals to improve our nation's higher education system like free tuition or debt cancellation don't address the myriad of issues they encounter in their journey toward a college degree. This infographic demonstrates how tackling rising college tuition and loan forgiveness alone will do little to ensure colleges are doing their job to promote upward mobility for all students while they're enrolled.

